Cover Letter for Product Analyst Intern

Hey, lovely people!

About Me

I am currently a student pursuing an integrated Bachelors-Masters Program in Economics from Indian Institute of Technology (IIT) Kanpur, India. Econs Major by degree, I am an explorer by nature and thanks to IIT Kanpur, I got to explore a lot of fields ranging from Computer Science, hardcore Maths and Statistics to working on ground level real-world problems at startups. I tried out various types of jobs and realised I like to work at the intersection of stuff - technical, business, finance, aesthetics, etc, collaborating with people and removes any barriers that come to these specialists, as I can understand their language and requirements, being in their work at some point in my life. All these motivated me to strive for a career as Product Manager, or as a fresher, a Product Analyst!

I tried hard for the role but out of luck got placed as Equities Analyst which I can't refuse due to the institute's policies even before the companies for Product roles could come. So, I am looking up for the opportunities to start my career in Product Domain. I also have a portfolio comprising some of the decks and problems I solved, and a blog to help freshers prepare for Product Management.

Why Google?

Any corporation is defined by the people who work there, the culture and utmost important, what is the vision and value proposition. On all the three fronts, Google stands high and it is quite hard to find a place which cumulatively encompasses all this, together. The people here are top notch in their fields of expertise. On top of this, the ownership given and the trust that goes behind is highly encouraging and above all, the mission of universal accessibility and the deliverance to it is awesome. Google actually values diversity and also the people who have knowledge in diverse fields. It is this diversity that breeds innovation and I don't think I could get a better place for me to grow and nurture than Google. So, yes, here I am!

Why Me?

I believe I stand strong on all the requirements, this role demands. On technological front, I have experience in similar roles through my past internships, coursework and projects. But, more than that it is my interest in working together with people, collaborating and achieving better results than working solo. I strive to deliver to my responsibilities with utmost dexterity and sincerity and have taken many initiatives in my past internships which also reaped significant results. I hope my resume will convey this.

Above all, I am delighted for the opportunity to apply and would love to get the feedback on my application, no matter the outcome. I would also be pleased to have a full-time opportunity.

Best Regards
